ABSTRACT

A direct outgrowth of the increasing concern toward accountability in education is the "Peer and Self-Evaluation Checklist" (PSEC), which was first developed in 1972. The PSEC was developed and refined to provide greater insight into an individual's competency. The checklist contains 60 items or criteria, which are distributed within the following six general areas of competency: a) goal-priority orientation--5 items; b) open-mindedness--8 items; c) willingness to work--4 items; d) human relations--7 items; e) personal characteristics--7 items; f) professional skills and competency--19 items. For each item there is a choice of six possible responses (with accompanying point values) which may be checked. The responses and point values are a) N/A--no points; b) totally unacceptable--1 point; c) poor--3 points; d) average--5 points; 3) above average--7 points; e) superior--9 points. The total point value revealed through the administration of the PSEC merely provides a frame of reference within which a specific person's competency may be viewed in light of the total points possible. (The instrument is included in this document, along with a score sheet.) (Author/JA)

Educators have traditionally given lip service to the process of evaluation, both peer evaluation and self-evaluation. In recent years there has been a concerted effort across a broad spectrum of educational levels to develop more sophisticated methods and "tools" which may be utilized in determining the effectiveness and efficiency of an individual or group of individuals in the performance of specific or general duties and responsibilities. Undoubtedly the renewed interest in educational evaluation processes and techniques is a direct result of the increased significance currently being given in educational circles to the term "accountability".

A direct outgrowth of the increasing concern toward accountability in education is the PEER AND SELF-EVALUATION CHECKLIST (PSEC) which was first developed in 1972. The PSEC was developed and refined in order to provide greater insight into an individual's competency. The checklist contains sixty (60) items or criteria which are distributed within the following six general areas of competency:

- (A). Goal-Priority Orientation -- 5 items
- (B). Open-mindedness -- 8 items
- (C). Willingness To Work -- 4 items
- (D). Human Relations -- 17 items
- (E). Personal Characteristics -- 7 items
- (F). Professional Skills and Competency -- 19 items.

For each of the sixty items comprising the instrument there is a choice of six possible responses (with accompanying point values) which may be checked. The responses include:

- (A). N/A -- no point values
- (B). Totally Unacceptable -- 1 point
- (C). Poor -- 3 points
- (D). Average -- 5 points
- (E). Above Average -- 7 points
- (F). Superior -- 9 points.

It should be noted that for each item which N/A is checked as the response, nine points should be subtracted from the total number of points which may possibly be earned. For example, if there are three such items which are checked N/A then 27 (3 X 9 pts.) should be subtracted from the total 540 possible points (60 X 9 pts.) leaving 513 possible points which may be earned by a specific individual. The total point value revealed through the administration of the PSEC merely provides a frame of reference within which a specific person's competency may be viewed in light of the total points possible.

The PSEC may be utilized to subjectively evaluate others (in light of the arbitrarily established criteria) as well as for self-evaluative purposes. In instances where an individual (administrator for example) wishes to utilize the PSEC to evaluate a second person it is recommended that the person being evaluated be encouraged to complete the instrument himself followed by an examination, comparison and frank discussion of the results which are obtained by both the person being evaluated and the individual initiating the evaluation process.

In the situation where an individual desires to initiate a self-evaluation he may merely complete the instrument himself or may elect to secure the assistance of working associates who should be asked to complete the instrument in an anonymous manner.

In attempting to complete a self-evaluation via the PSEC it is possible and often advisable for the person instigating the self-evaluation to compare his concept of his own competencies with the anonymous responses of those associates who have agreed to also complete the instrument. In examining the responses to the various items within the instrument it is possible to obtain an overview of the general competencies of an individual by viewing all sixty items as a whole. In addition, one may view each of the six general categories comprising the PSEC as an entity in itself. Reviewing each category separately provides greater insight into the six arbitrarily created dimensions of professional competency as provided in the PSEC.

A score sheet is included in the Appendix which provides for tabulation, in numerical order, of all sixty items within the instrument. In addition, the score sheet enables items within each of the six general categories of competency to be tabulated as portions of a sub-group.
